Professional Profile

Dr. Lindahl is an electrical engineer with expertise in power systems, electromechanical machinery (motors and generators), electrochemical systems (e.g. batteries, fuel cells, and their associated electronics), and renewable and distributed energy systems. He also has expertise in sensors, instrumentation, and signal processing, and applies this expertise to conduct data-driven investigations of equipment and systems, from large industrial control centers to small consumer electronics and medical devices. His professional activities involve, amongst others, conducting complex investigations related to product safety, reliability, failures, and standards compliance; advising clients and providing engineering services on matters concerning intellectual property; and developing condition monitoring and fault detection and isolation techniques.

Prior to Exponent, Dr. Lindahl was a postdoctoral associate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. While there, he conducted research and oversaw graduate student projects related to smart grid power management and control, condition monitoring in electrical and mechanical systems, and smart building technology development including capacitive occupancy sensing and HVAC performance tracking via smart meter measurements. He received his PhD from Montana State University for his work devising sensing methods and power control management schemes for solid oxide fuel cell systems.

Throughout his career, Dr. Lindahl has provided technical and scientific services to clients in a variety of industries including aerospace, construction, electrical power, oil and gas, automotive and marine transportation, consumer electronics, medical devices and equipment, and national defense. He's co-authored over three dozen technical research articles in high-impact academic journals and conference proceedings, published a book chapter on photovoltaics and the environment, and was awarded a patent regarding recognizing electrical service events and autonomizing load dispatch. His research work has also been featured in news outlets and engineering society magazines including MIT News, the SNAME Marine Technology Magazine, and the IEEE Instrumentation & Measurement Magazine.
